LALJI FOUNDATION

Committed to Community Development,

Community development – Women's empowerment CCWWT

Skonge District – Tabora Region and Magu District - Mwanza Region,

Date: 19 August and 12 September 2026

Venue: Skonge District and Magu District – Tabora and Mwanza Regions

1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Lalji Foundation is a registered non-governmental organization (NGO) in Tanzania dedicated to improving the lives of vulnerable communities through sustainable development initiatives. The Foundation works across key sectors, including education, healthcare, economic empowerment, community development, and humanitarian assistance, with the goal of creating lasting positive change.

Chama Cha Wanawake Wajane Tanzania (CCWWT) is a community-based organization dedicated to improving the social and economic well-being of widows across Tanzania. The organization was established to address the challenges faced by widows, including poverty, unemployment, limited access to economic opportunities, social exclusion, and inadequate support services.

Lalji Foundation has donated a total of 50 beehives to Chama Cha Wanawake Wajane Tanzania (CCWWT) in Tabora and Mwanza Regions as part of its women's economic empowerment initiative.

The donation aims to provide women, particularly widows and other vulnerable women, with productive assets that can help them establish and expand beekeeping and honey-production activities. Through this support, beneficiaries are expected to generate income, improve household livelihoods, and become more economically self-reliant.

Naomy Isaya, Community Development Officer (CDO) of Tabora Municipal, appreciated Lalji Foundation and CCWWT for introducing this important economic empowerment initiative for women in Tabora. The provision of beehives will enable beneficiaries to participate in beekeeping as an income-generating activity and create opportunities for long-term economic growth. I encourage the beneficiaries to treat the beehives as valuable productive assets, ensure proper management, and follow recommended beekeeping practices. The Municipal Council is committed to providing the necessary guidance and support to help ensure that the initiative achieves its intended objectives and benefits the wider community."

Ms Judith Kahatano, Projects Coordinator of Lalji Foundation, The donation of 50 beehives in Tabora and Mwanza is intended to provide beneficiaries with productive assets that can generate income over the long term. Our expectation is that the women will take full ownership of the project, manage the beehives responsibly, and reinvest part of the income to expand their beekeeping activities. Lalji Foundation remains committed to supporting initiatives that promote self-reliance, dignity, and sustainable economic opportunities for women.”

Rabia Ally Moyo, Chairperson of Chama Cha Wanawake Wajane Tanzania (CCWWT), expressed her sincere appreciation to Lalji Foundation for its generous donation of 50 modern beehives to support widows in Skonge District, Tabora Region, and Magu District, mwanza Region. She described the donation as a significant investment in the economic empowerment of widows, noting that it will provide sustainable livelihood opportunities and improve the welfare of many families.

Rabia Ally Moyo also thanked the leadership of Lalji Foundation for partnering with CCWWT to support vulnerable women and reaffirmed the organization's commitment to ensuring that the donated beehives are managed effectively. She expressed her hope that the partnership between CCWWT and Lalji Foundation would continue to expand, creating more opportunities for widows across Tanzania to achieve sustainable economic empowerment and improved livelihoods.
